Water

The water industry has adopted technology in the form of artificial intelligence used in pipes and dams to monitor conditions and to determine maintenance and service needs. Hard hats and glasses fitted with cameras are examples of how the industry have used existing personal protective equipment to adopt technology in the industry, providing responsive and efficient training and repair solutions.